

BEWARE BILL 257

It Could Shut Down Canada

Imagine if you missed an important flight because your airline went on strike; or your company went bankrupt because union bosses shut down the railroads or an important business deal failed because a labour dispute stopped banks from completing a transaction.

Events like these will become a lot more common if Parliament passes Bill 257.

This bill would make it illegal for federally-regulated businesses to hire replacement workers during a strike. It would even be illegal for unionized employees to cross a picket line.

Here's what Bill 257 would mean for Canada:

More power for union bosses to shut down businesses and to cripple key infrastructure industries such as trucking firms, banks, ports, airlines and telecommunication companies.

Less freedom for unionized employees who will lose the right to earn a living during a strike.

Inconvenience for Canadian consumers and hardship for Canadian businesses.

Bill 257 will help Canada's union bosses but it will harm Canada's economic prosperity.

That's why Bill 257 must be stopped.

The Bloc and the NDP support this bill; most Conservatives are opposed to it. That's why the fate of Bill 257 rests in the hands of Liberal leader Stephane Dion.

Contact Mr. Dion today and urge him to vote against this bill.
